DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 101

1. 35 U.S.C. 101 reads as follows:

Whoever invents or discovers any new and useful process, machine, manufacture, or composition of matter, or any new and useful improvement thereof, may obtain a patent therefor, subject to the conditions and requirements of this title.

2. Claims 83-123 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 101 because the claimed invention is directed to non-statutory subject matter.

3. Claims 83-123 are drawn to a "program" per se as recited in the preamble (computer program product is defined as computer readable code stored on any compatible computer readable medium. And the any compatible computer readable medium can be carrier waves) and as such is non-statutory subject matter. See MPEP § 2106.IV.B.1.a. Data structures not claimed as embodied in computer readable media are descriptive material per se and are not statutory because they are not capable of causing functional change in the computer. See, e.g., Warmerdam, 33 F.3d at 1361, 31 USPQ2d at 1760 (claim to a data structure per se held nonstatutory). Such claimed data structures do not define any structural and functional interrelationships between the data structure and other claimed aspects of the invention, which permit the data structure's functionality to be realized. In contrast, a claimed computer readable medium encoded with a data structure defines structural and functional interrelationships between the data structure and the computer software and hardware components which permit the data structure's functionality to be realized, and is thus statutory. Similarly, computer programs claimed as computer listings per se, i.e., the descriptions or expressions of the programs are not physical "things." They are neither computer components nor statutory processes, as they are not "acts" being performed. Such claimed computer programs do not define any structural and functional interrelationships between the computer program and other claimed elements of a computer, which permit the computer program's functionality to be realized.

Allowable Subject Matter

4. Claims 1-82 are allowed over prior art of record. The following is an examiner's statement of reasons for allowance: Murveit et al. disclose a method and system for fast on-line automatic speaker/environment adaptation suitable for speech/speaker recognition in the presence of changing environmental conditions, the method comprising acts of: performing front-end processing on an acoustic input signal, wherein the front-end processing generates MEL frequency cepstral features representative of the acoustic input signal (see reference); performing recognition and adaptation by: providing the MEL frequency cepstral features to a speech recognizer, wherein the speech recognizer utilizes the MEL frequency cepstral features and a current list of acoustic training models to determine at least one best hypothesis (referring to reference); receiving, from the speech recognizer, at least one best hypothesis, associated acoustic training models, and associated probabilities (common in speech recognizer); computing a pre-adaptation acoustic score by recognizing an utterance using the associated acoustic training models; choosing acoustic training models from the associated acoustic training models; performing adaptation on the chosen associated acoustic training models; and performing recognition and adaptation iteratively until the acoustic score ceases to improve; choosing the best hypothesis as recognized words once the acoustic score ceases to improve; and outputting the recognized words (referring to reference). Murveit et al. fail to specifically disclose computing a post-adaptation acoustic score by recognizing the utterance using the adapted acoustic training models; comparing the pre-adaptation acoustic score with the post-adaptation acoustic score to check for improvement; modifying the current list of acoustic training models to include the adapted acoustic training models, if the acoustic score improved after performing adaptation. Furthermore, it would have not been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time of invention to modify Murveit et al. in order to obtain the claimed invention. Therefore, claims 1-82 are allowed over prior art of record.

Any comments considered necessary by applicant must be submitted no later than the payment of the issue fee and, to avoid processing delays, should preferably accompany the issue fee. Such submissions should be clearly labeled "Comments on Statement of Reasons for Allowance."
